

Searching Wikis

Searching Wikis

A wiki is a website that allows easy creation and editing of content by a community of users. Wikis are often used as collaborative work spaces within communities, organizations and corporations. Wikis often contain valuable information such as conference content, archived student and professional work, tutorials, book reviews and more. Because of the open/editable nature of wikis, caution should be used when citing wikis in research projects. Information discovered in wikis should be corroborated through other sources.

Tools for Wiki Searching

Wiki.com

Google Wiki Search

How to Cite Wikis

University of British Columbia – How do I cite wikis and blogs in my paper?

Yale University – The Writing Center – Wikipedia

Wikipedia – Citing Wikipedia

University of Baltimore – Citing Sources, APA Style \(6th Edition\)